Any comments?

The Construction industry is in a mess, skill base is low morale is low and needs as much support as possible.

The information and advice from the industry has been good, but the advice from Govt is often misleading and inconclusive.

The financial support has been very good, but is only storing up a problem for the future, which no one seems to be thinking about

Really keen to get back to face-to-face networking, as it is impractical to meet new people over video calls online events need innovative solutions to network as well.

Looking forward to normality!

There's a lot of focus on Covid - there's another very significant spectre on the very near horizon in the form of Brexit. This is damaging confidence as much, if not more, than Covid and will be problematic for the recovery of the industry in 21 and beyond.

Although our turnover is lower it is still at 80%|90% we just hope it remains this way

Keep safe

Work per sector is different

Retail - only existing contracts put on hold but in 2021 are going on site.

Workplace - existing contracts being seen through but with lots of additional costs which is difficult. There is still projects out there but it is a little like 'kicking the ball around the field' and no definite goals, penalty shots being taken. Others are doing lots of strategy work which hopefully results in April 2021 kick off. The vaccine is important for return to work.

We must start a return to normal events + getting teams/people back into our towns and cities - the post pandemic impact is going to be massive.

The measures that the government have implemented - i.e. furlough scheme, will cripple out economy for years to come putting the nation into irrecoverable debt. What taxation measures will the Gov need to take to repay that debt - who will be taxed the most? How we will achieve our Zero

Carbon targets when there is no money available to implement the measures needed to make the change.

Are you planning on arranging any virtual networking events any soon?

Networking events will never be exactly as before, however physical meetings are important. Breakfast meetings can be done, we just need to sit self distanced (think classroom layout) and not buffet food, plated up.

All time periods stated will also depend upon a vaccine being issued across the country and world

Total lack of confidence in being able to re enter the industry thats all i have known for the past 48 years!!

Question 8 depends very much on progress achieved in vaccine and control measures in controlling the virus.

Face to face contact through physical networking is highlighted as being an essential part of working life and business effectiveness.

Government and Stakeholders not prepared for a pandemic - absolutely shocking > 50,000 deaths on their watch - disgraceful - no clear route map

In reality the industry as a whole is still in decline with fewer experienced staff than ever before on both trade and professional level. A joined up strategy between professional bodies and organisations is required to tackle this. Is the FBE up for that

Thanks for keeping in touch

People still need to network, so there is merit in what the fbe is doing.

Government has been rubbish and failed to properly consult or engage with the construction industry properly. Those parts of the economy that are working are inspite of Government and not because

Great events guys, thank you for organising during these difficult times

Everything depends on the availability and roll out of an effective vaccine.

I don't think I would be entirely confident that the worst of this is over until vaccine has been approved and substantially administered - even then I would expect to maintain elements of existing precautions (social distancing/hand sanitizing etc).

Return to face to face networking would be subject to vaccination and government guidelines.

WE AS ARCHITECTS HAVE FOUND A MASSIVE INCREASE IN WORKLOAD ACROSS ALL THE SECTORS WE WORK IN
